I am passionate about making Stockton a better place for all of us. I have no political ambitions other than serving as mayor, nor do I have a personal agenda beyond doing what is best for Stockton; I have no desire to waste anyone's time with political grandstanding.

I am the most seasoned candidate by virtue of my history in business where I had responsibility for 800 employees, and managed million dollar budgets that were similar in structure to those of the City of Stockton.

My vision for the future includes improvement in the reputation of our fine city, and the development of a General Plan that promotes coherent growth over the next two decades.

It is vital that city government focuses on its primary functions: the safety and security of our citizens, and to maintain and improve the infrastructure upon which we all depend.

We suffer from a high level of crime, partly related to our inability to hire and retain sufficient numbers of law enforcement officers. By continuing to recruit residents of Stockton, we'll increase the likelihood they will spend their entire careers here.

We must meet our responsibilities and deliver services the citizens of Stockton rightfully expect.
